Peter Leyden Encore

If you missed renowned futurist Peter Leyden's trip into the Lehigh Valley, here's your chance to, well, go back to the future. Leyden's 80-minute keynote presentation is now available at LVPC.ORG for anyone who missed his ground-breaking view of the future, or anyone who just wants to take another look.

Leyden, the former Wired Magazine Managing Editor who spent 20 years in Silicon Valley and co-authored the "The Long Boom" and "What's Next," captivated more than 120 people attending the Lehigh Valley Planning Commission's FutureLV event on December 6.

"I'm not sure we've ever had a keynote speaker get more positive reaction than Peter, so we wanted to share his knowledge and expertise with everyone," said LVPC Executive Director Becky Bradley. "Peter was gracious enough to not only let us videotape his presentation, but put it out there for anyone who couldn't attend our FutureLV event."

During his FutureLV appearance at Lehigh University's Iacocca Hall, Leyden discussed everything from the technology revolution we're in to the impact of driverless cars to the role President Trump may have on how the United States handles its transition into an uncertain future.

You can find it all right here.
